ESA 2025

We warmly invite you to Tarntanya (Adelaide), on the traditional lands of the Kaurna People, for ESA 2025.

Understanding how nature works involves uncovering the fundamental processes that drive ecosystems, exploring key interactions, and sharing these insights in meaningful ways. These efforts not only advance the field of ecology but also create compelling narratives that connect people to nature while informing practical, evidence-based approaches to addressing ecological challenges.

In a time when the need for robust ecological science has never been greater, ESA 2025 will celebrate the incredible breadth and depth of ecology in Australia. The conference will highlight the intersections of ecological theory, research, policy, and on-ground action, fostering conversations that inspire new ideas and collaborations.

Join us at ESA 2025 to connect with fellow ecologists, share your work, and be part of shaping the future of our field. Together, we'll celebrate the science of ecology and its role in creating a sustainable and thriving future.

We can't wait to see you for an inspiring and impactful event!

Indigenous communities are the custodians of much of Australia's biodiversity, and as such, perspectives derived from Indigenous socio-ecological knowledge systems are crucial to biodiversity conservation. At ESA conferences, the connection between Indigenous scientists, researchers, land managers and the wider ecological community will be facilitated through the hosting of Indigenous Ecological Knowledge symposia and cultural field trips. They provide an opportunity for Indigenous people to access wider networks and to have their perspectives considered within this important meeting of the Australian ecological community, and important pathways for two-way knowledge sharing.
